

Outcome

We expect this research will lay the foundations for designing large-scale studies and early intervention/education programs to promote mental well-being.

Interventions will address loneliness from an individual- to a macro-level of analysis and align with the paths of transformation outlined by the World Health Organization to provide adequate support for young people's mental health.

